Appendix A - JIS X 0201 character set

The JIS X 0201 character set is a Japanese character encoding of the original ASCII character table. Initially in 7 bit format, but nowadays usually used in 8 bit format, thus covering potential character codes from 0 to 255. The following Unicode characters are included:

Appendix B - JIS X 0208 character set

The JIS X 0208 character set is a subset of the Unified CJK Ideographs character set, as defined by the International Unicode Consortium. Further information can be found at the International Unicode Consortium web page www.unicode.org. Some additional Unicode characters are also part of the character set. The following 6879 Unicode characters are included:

Appendix C - shift-JIS character set

The shift-JIS character set is a subset of the Unified CJK Ideographs character set, as defined by the International Unicode Consortium. Further information can be found at the International Unicode Consortium web page www.unicode.org. Some additional Unicode characters are also part of the character set. The following 6879 Unicode characters are included:

Appendix E - Arabic character set

The Arabic character set includes the following Unicode character sets:

- Arabic 0x0600 - 0x06FF
- Arabic supplement 0x0750 - 0x077F
- Arabic presentation forms A 0xFB50 - 0xFDFF
- Arabic presentation forms B 0xFE70 - 0xFEFF

All these character representations must be present in order for an Arabic font to work properly.

The Unicode character sets are defined by the International Unicode Consortium. Further information can be found at the International Unicode Consortium web page www.unicode.org.

Arabic fonts are more complicated than the usual standard font. Characters must be created in these separate Unicode ranges, with the two primary ones containing basic characters (Arabic, 0x0600 - 0x060F) and character representations (Arabic presentation forms A, 0xFB50 - 0xFDFF). The latter range contains all characters in mostly four, sometimes three or two different versions. The four basic representations of a particular character are for start of a word, inside a word, at the end of a word, and for single character words. The characters in the basic range (0x0600 - 0x060F) are the same as the single character word representations.

easyGUI (and Windows) uses primarily the Arabic presentation forms A 0xFB50 - 0xFDFF range characters, but stores text as basic 0x0600 - 0x060F range characters. At run-time the basic character codes are translated to the 0xFB50 - 0xFDFF range characters, according to specific rules. Most characters are simply translated based on position in a word, but some are treated specially, merging two characters into one.

To easily include the correct Arabic characters in a project there is an Arabic characters setting in the Font editor, Selection tab. Check this option to ensure that all relevant Arabic characters are included for the font in question.
